

Local Camper Is Injured By Powder Blast

Lincoln Mader, 14, and Bob Wilson, 14, Burned When Cannon Goes Off.

When they walked in front of a make-shift cannon, used during reveille, Lincoln Mader, Jr., 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Link Mader, N. Court-st., and Robert Wilson, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Wilson, N. Court-st., suffered painful burns Saturday at 6.30 a. m. at Camp Nelson Dodd at Brinkhaven, near Mt. Vernon.

RAISING FLAG
The boys were going through their morning exercises with Mader and Wilson in charge of the flag-raising. It is thought the youths got their positions mixed and just as they walked in front of the cannon it was touched off.

Young Mader received the full shot on both his legs from his hips to his ankles while Wilson was only slightly burned being farther from the powder blast than Mader was.

Lincoln was burned severely with a large blast of powder striking him in one spot on the calf of his leg. It is reported that he will possibly have a mark of this powder burn the remainder of his life.

He was treated with anti-tetanus serum at the camp for the prevention of lockjaw and upon orders of the camp physician he was returned to his home Saturday evening. Again Sunday he was given anti-tetanus serum.

WORE SWIMMING SUIT
Young Mader wore a bathing suit at the time of the accident which is fortunate, inasmuch as no goods of any kind was taken into his flesh by the powder charge, which would have made infection much easier.

He was resting comfortably Monday.

Wilson's burns were thought to be not serious, and he remained in camp for the remaining week for which the party from this city is scheduled. Those besides young Mader and Wilson from this city at the camp are Charles Crawford, Otis Mader, a brother of the injured lad, and John Mader, a cousin. There are 160 boys in the camp under the direction of Mr. Donaldson, camp director.

RAIN STORMS BREAK HEAT THRU STATE

Lake Erie Cities Suffer Property Damage By Ravaging
Rain and Wind.

By International News Service
Rainstorms, which bore into Ohio yesterday on the tail of an oppressive mid-July heat wave, today left this section of the state basking in breezes.

The storms, accompanied by high winds and thundershowers, caused considerable damage in several villages along Lake Erie's shore east of Cleveland. Caught under a 60-mile wind, trees were uprooted and telephone poles snapped. Numerous summer cottages east of Cleveland were damaged.

Painesville apparently bore the brunt of the storm's fury. Streets and highways were flooded while a strong northwest wind pulled down trees and ripped the city's communication system.

Alois Knox, 45, of Cleveland, was drowned yesterday while swimming at Willow Beach, near Willowick. He struck his head against a rock while diving.

Week-end traffic accidents enacted a toll of 14 lives and while nine Ohioans met violent deaths by drowning, suicide and an airplane crash, it was shown today by a state-wide survey which was made by International News Service.

Miss Mary Edna Fyle, 26, Columbus district nurse, was killed Sunday when her automobile, which she was driving, collided with another machine near Fairmont, W. Va. She was instantly killed. A companion escaped uninjured and the occupants of the other car were slightly bruised.

Mrs. Abraham Goldberg, 42, and 6-year-old Ethel Guten, both of Cleveland, were instantly killed when the truck in which they were riding overturned near Cleveland.

Mike Stricka, 51, lost his life when he was run down by an automobile while he was crossing a street at Elyria.

I. N. Grafton, 71, president of the Junction City Sewer Pipe Company, was fatally injured when his automobile skidded and upset near Lancaster. He died a short time later.

On Young Girl—Father and Three Other Men Beat
Youth Who Represented Himself as Deputy.

About 300 persons milled around the Oxford town hall last night for more than two hours. Loud cries of "lynch him!" disturbed the attempting to gain a full account of the attack.

RANGOON, Burma, July 14—The jungle fastnesses of southern Burma, home of carnivorous animals and little-known native tribes described as "Demon Worshippers," were being combed by searching parties today for Eric, young British aviator who crashed on an attempted flight from England to Australia.

FOUND ON BANK
Intensive search for Hook began when his companion on the ill-fated flight, Jimmie Matthews, was picked up by friendly natives of Prome, Burma, 160 miles north of Rangoon on the left bank of the Irrawaddy river.

Bruised and battered and physically exhausted, Matthews told his rescuers he had been forced to leave Hook behind in a dying condition after pulling and carrying him for more than a week through the jungle undergrowth.

Both Hook and Matthews were injured when their plane fell, but the former most severely. Carrying him for hours on his back, and then alternating by dragging him through the tangled brush, Matthews stayed for eight days in an effort to reach civilization with his injured comrade.

At length, when physical exhaustion overcame them both, Hook prevailed upon Matthews to go ahead alone in search of aid.

HOLD LITTLE HOPE.
Little hope is held out for Hook's rescue. The wild animals in the district are man-eating and fearful, and in addition it is feared he may be set upon by the "demon worshippers," human beings little above the animal scale, who inhabit the territory.

The flier's plane was totally wrecked when it struck a bamboo clump on a mountainside on June 3.

BURKE FLEES JUST BEFORE POLICE RAID

Fugitive, Wanted For At Least
21 Murders, Escapes Law
By Few Minutes.

NEWAGO, Mich., July 14—Aided by squads of Michigan State Police and Deputy sheriffs, 15 heavily-armed Chicago detectives today continued their hunt for Fred Burke, bank robber and reputed slayer of 21 men.

ON LAKE SHORE
The searchers swooped down on a cottage on the wooded shores of Hess Lake yesterday where Burke is known to have been in hiding for three months. The most "wanted" man in Chicago police history had slipped away shortly before the raid, however.

Burke is wanted for the St. Valentine massacre of seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters in Chicago. He is also believed to have taken part in the slaying of Frankie Yale, Brooklyn gang leader.

Rewards totalling $101,000 have been placed on Burke's head. Rushing the cottage with 17 sub-machine guns and protected by steel bullet shields, the police found the hide-out deserted except for a blonde woman who said she was the wife of William H. Smith.

HELD AS AID
Unsuspecting, Smith drove up to the house several hours later and was taken prisoner by the authorities. Smith operates a mail and hops shop in Grand Rapids. He was rushed to Chicago for questioning, for he is supposed to have been Burke's companion in the hide-out. Burke has used Smith's name at times as an alias.

Burke is sought for 21 murders and bank robberies totalling more than $1,000,000 in loot. He first became the object of a nationwide man-hunt after he shot and killed Policeman Charles Skelly of St. Joseph, Mich. Search of his St. Joseph home revealed an arsenal, including sub-machine guns found to have been used in the St. Valentine's Day massacre.

FOUND EVIDENCE
Police also found there $319,850 in bonds stolen from the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Jefferson, Wisconsin, on November 7, 1929.

Burke is also suspected of slaying three "Red" McLaughlin gangsters in Detroit and three more in Toledo, O. He is also wanted for ransom kidnappings totalling $500,000 in Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Toledo, Brooklyn, Akron, New York and other cities.

Senator Capper of Kansas, Visits Hoover, Asks Farm Board to Buy Wheat.

WASHINGTON, July 14—Like the cat that came back, the ancient issue of farm relief returned to the administration doorstep today calling loudly for attention.

SELLS AT 85
With wheat selling around 85 cents a bushel, the lowest price in nearly twenty years, renewed demands for corrective action are fairly inundating Washington. Cotton, corn and other basic commodities are similarly low-priced so that the howls for relief are not coming entirely from the wheat-producing states.

Senator Arthur Capper (R.) of Kansas, who has been demanding during the past week that the farm board purchase 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in the open market, spent the week-end with President Hoover at his Rapidan Fishing Camp. There was a full discussion of the situation, but what, if anything, is to come of it was not apparent today.

One development that is considered more or less of a certainty is that the bitter fight over the debenture plan will be revived when Congress meets again, unless there is a marked recovery in grain prices between now and December.

And no one in authority in Washington envisions such recovery. The 1930 crop of wheat is now coming on the market—abundantly and in great volume—to add to the already glutted elevators and storage places.

The administration was barely able to stop the debenture plan in the last Congress on the plea that the farm board had not yet begun in operation "sufficiently long" to demonstrate the soundness and workability of the administration's program. The senate twice voted for the debenture, but the House, which it is the intent of the White House.

CALLED UNPOPULAR
The debenture has been repeatedly denounced as "unpopular" and "economically reprehensible" by President Hoover. It is a characterization which its advocates have warmly disputed. That it is coming up again in December is accepted almost as a foregone conclusion. And with grain prices dipping to new low levels, despite the ministrations of the year-old farm board, there is admittedly serious doubt as to whether even the docile House can stop it next time.

The debenture sponsors, who number some of the most influential members of the Senate, are going to have a powerful argument to support their position. The fact that commodity prices have sunk steadily since the farm board began operation puts them in a position where they plan to say to the White House:

"We have tried your plan. It has not worked. Now we will try our plan."

The extensive trip which Chairman Alexander Legge and Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde are making through the west, seeking to "sell" the grain-producers the idea of reducing acreage, admittedly has failed. Everywhere the two administration officials have had to confront the situation that one year after the administration's effort to relieve the farmer, wheat is selling for the lowest price in 17 years.

FIGHT LEGGE
In Kansas, Chairman Legge ran into demands from the Wichita Beacon that he resign his office. Everywhere the two officials have met with dissatisfaction and criticism of conditions and policies.

The farm board is now holding some 60,000 bushels of wheat which it purchased at from $1.15 to $1.20 a bushel. On Saturday it sold some 2,250,000 bushels of this wheat at about 50 cents a bushel. The sale itself resulted in renewed criticism from the wheat belt, where the new crop is coming on the market. The sale put the board in the position of competing with the new crop.

Republican members of Congress from the great commodity producing states up for reelection are acutely worried over the situation. Like the producers themselves, the politically-minded Congressmen are inundating Washington with demands for corrective action.

FEAR LYNCHING IN HAMILTON FOLLOWING ATTACK ON GIRL

23-Year-Old Youth Held In Butler-Co Jail Following Attack
On Young Girl—Father and Three Other Men Beat
Youth Who Represented Himself as Deputy.

HAMILTON, O., July 14—Fearing mob violence, officials today placed a double guard around the Butler-co jail here, where Daniel McFadden, 23, was held after being held, following an alleged criminal attack upon a young girl last Saturday.

A threat of lynching broke out in the quiet little college town of Oxford last night following the assaulted attack. McFadden, it was said, attacked one of four girls who had spent the afternoon at a picnic near Oxford.

About 300 persons milled around the Oxford town hall jail last night for more than two hours. Loud cries of "lynch him!" disturbed the attempting to gain a full account efforts of authorities who were of the attack.

Miss Jane Finch, 20, of Oxford, who works here as a stenographer, is the victim of the alleged attack.
She is under the care of a physician.

Her alleged assailant suffered a severe beating at the hands of four men, including Raymond Finch, the girl's father. He also required medical attention for his bruises.

A criminal attack charge has been filed against McFadden and he is expected to be arraigned today.

Miss Finch was on a picnic with three other girls. As they were preparing to leave about sundown yesterday, McFadden, displaying a Franklin-co deputy sheriff's badge, approached the girls and asked for Miss Finch, according to the girl's story.

Miss Finch acknowledged her identity. McFadden informed her that a man from Dayton would arrive shortly with a message for her and that she should remain with him. He told her companions to leave.

When the other girls were out of sight, McFadden attacked her, it was said.

Four men including the girl's father, approached McFadden and Miss Finch as they were walking back. Miss Finch cried for help and McFadden was severely beaten. He was taken to the Oxford jail, and was later brought here.

the former most severely. Carry-

To Extradite Goldberg Charged With Violation of Blue Sky Laws Here.

Sheriff Frank Davis left early Sunday for Springfield, Ill., where he will deliver extradition papers to the governor of Illinois requesting the return to this city of Ellis
A. Goldberg, alias E. Gardner, under arrest in Chicago. Governor Myers V. Cooper Saturday afternoon issued extradition papers to Prosecuting Attorney Emmitt L.
Crist.

Goldberg is accused of selling securities in Ohio without having first obtained a license from the division of securities.

The requisition was issued at the joint request of Prosecutor Crist and the office of the state securities division with Sheriff Davis visited the governor's office.

Goldberg, when returned here, will be held in the county jail pending submission of his case to the grand jury.

The requisition is based upon an affidavit dated July 10, sworn to before Squire W. H. Dietrick in Scioto-tw-p by C. H. Dougherty, a resident dentist of the state institution for the feeble-minded at Orient. Dougherty charges Goldberg sold him 50 shares of class A stock of the Phoebe Snow Cleaning and Dyeing Corp. on January 3 without a license from the state.

Davis was accompanied to Chicago by Harry Topolosky.

BURKE FLEES JUST BEFORE POLICE RAID

Fugitive, Wanted For At Least
21 Murders, Escapes Law
By Few Minutes.

NEWAGO, Mich., July 14—Aided by squads of Michigan State Police and Deputy sheriffs, 15 heavily-armed Chicago detectives today
Burke, bank robber and reputed slayer of 21 men.

ON LAKE SHORE

The searchers swooped down on a cottage on the wooded shores of Hess Lake yesterday where Burke is known to have been in hiding for three months. The most "wanted" man in Chicago police history had slipped away shortly before the raid, however.

Burke is wanted for the St. Valentine massacre of seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters in Chicago. He is also believed to have taken part in the slaying of Frankie Yale, Brooklyn gang leader.

Rewards totalling $101,000 have been placed on Burke's head.

Rushing the cottage with 17 submachine guns and protected by steel bullet shields, the police found the hide-out deserted except for a blonde woman who said she was the wife of William H. Smith.

HELD AS AID

Unsuspecting, Smith drove up to the house several hours later and was taken prisoner by the authorities. Smith operates a malt and hops shop in Grand Rapids. He was rushed to Chicago for questioning, for he is supposed to have been Burke's companion in the hide-out. Burke has used Smith's name at times as an alias.

Burke is sought for 21 murders and bank robberies totalling more than $1,000,000 in loot. He first became the object of a nationwide man-hunt after he shot and killed Policeman Charles Skelly of St.
Joseph, Mich. Search of his St.
Joseph home revealed an arsenal, including sub-machine guns found to have been used in the St. Valentine's Day massacre.

FOUND EVIDENCE

Police also found there $319,850 in bonds stolen from the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Jefferson, Wisconsin, on November 7, 1929.

Burke is also suspected of slay-ing three "Red" McLaughlin gangsters in Detroit and three more in Toledo, O. He is also wanted for ransom kidnappings totalling $500-000 in Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, Toledo, Brooklyn, Akron, New York and other cities.

Senator Capper of Kansas, Visits Hoover, Asks Farm
Board to Buy Wheat.

WASHINGTON, July 14—Like the cat that came back, the ancient issue of farm relief returned to the administration doorstep today calling loudly for attention.

SELLS AT 85

With wheat selling around 85 cents a bushel, the lowest price in nearly twenty years, renewed demands for corrective action are fairly inundating Washington. Cotton, corn and other basic commodities are similarly low-priced so that the howls for relief are not coming entirely from the wheat-producing states.

Senator Arthur Capper (R.) of Kansas, who has been demanding during the past week that the farm board purchase 100,000,000 bushels of wheat in the open market, spent the week-end with President Hoover at his Rapidan Fishing Camp. There was a full discussion of the situation, but what, if anything, is to come of it was not apparent today.

One development that is considered more or less of a certainty is that the bitter fight over the debenture plan will be revived when Congress meets again, unless there is a marked recovery in grain prices between now and December.
And no one in authority in Washington envisions such recovery.
The 1930 crop of wheat is now coming on the market—abundantly and in great volume—to add to the already glutted elevators and storage places.

The administration was barely able to stop the debenture plan in the last Congress on the plea that the farm board had not yet been in operation sufficiently long to demonstrate the soundness and workability of the administration's program. The senate twice voted for the debenture, but the obedient House killed it at the behest of the White House.

CALLED UNSOUND

The debenture has been repeatedly denounced as "unsound" and economically reprehensible by President Hoover. It is a characterization which its advocates have warmly disputed. That it is coming up again in December is accepted almost as a foregone conclusion. And with grain prices dipping to new low levels, despite the ministrations of the year-old farm board, there is admittedly serious doubt as to whether even the docile House can stop it next time.

The debenture sponsors, who number some of the most influential members of the Senate, are going to have a powerful argument to support their position. The fact that commodity prices have sunk steadily since the farm board began operation puts them in a position where they plan to say to the White House.

"We have tried your plan. It has not worked. Now we will try our plan."

The extensive trip which Chairman Alexander Legge and Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M.
Hyde are making through the west, seeking to "sell" the grain-producers the idea of reducing acreage, admittedly has failed.
Everywhere the two administration officials have had to confront the situation that one year after the administration's effort to relieve the farmer, wheat is selling for the lowest price in 17 years.

FIGHT LEGGE

In Kansas, Chairman Legge ran into demands from the Wichita Beacon that he resign his office.
Everywhere the two officials have met with dissatisfaction and criticism of conditions and policies.

The farm board is now holding some 60,000 bushels of wheat which it purchased at from $1.15 to $1.20 a bushel. On Saturday it sold some 2,250,000 bushels of this wheat at about 80 cents a bushel.
The sale itself resulted in renewed criticism from the wheat belt, where the new crop is coming on the market. The sale put the board in the position of competing with the new crop.

Republican members of Congress from the great commodity producing states up for reelection are acutely worried over the situation.
Like the producers themselves, the politically-minded Congressmen are inundating Washington with demands for corrective action.

$477 COGNOVIT

favor of James R. Geren and Ralph Holzman against Alexander Mace for the sum of $477.10

Joy Walks

By LESLIE L. PONTIUS

To a Nature Lover, the most interesting place in Pickaway county is that little parcel of unglaciated land in Washington-twp. known as the Devil's backbone. I do not know why it was given such a name; neither can I tell why the Glacier went around it, but it did, and that is the reason why the soil is more shallow and not as productive as the surrounding country.

Man with his ax and his grazing stock has about destroyed all that remained of the pre-glacial flora. There are still some chestnut, oaks, trefolls, mosses, lichens and bush clovers to be found there. There is another very interesting clover growing there known as Buffalo clover. This clover is nowhere abundant, although its range is from Canada to Mexico. It comes up in the spring from seed, blossoms in June, and dies as soon as the seed ripens. This clover is useless for forming a sod or for forage, and will never be troublesome or noxious, as it is short lived by nature, and perishes from mastication of any kind. Floyd Bartley and I, to the best of my knowledge sent to the State Herbarium the second specimen ever recorded from Ohio. The other came from Delaware county. I have placed a few dry stalks of this clover in John J. Mack's store where all who are interested may see it.

Bartley, the botanist, ere long, will be Bartley, the naturalist; just as soon as he learns how to handle snakes. We were asked by Charles Walker, assistant curator of the State Museum, to collect some natural history specimens from this county for the museum; so one sizzling hot day Bartley and I explored the Devil's Backbone; he, looking for plants, and I, for insects, batracians and reptiles. Batracians are salamanders, toads and frogs or animals with smooth, slimy skins. Reptiles are animals with scaly skins and include the snakes, turtles and lizards.

Salamanders are lizard like animals, nocturnal in habit, subsist on insects, and live under rocks and logs in moist unglacial soil. I raised a big flat piece of shale and a two striped salamander scurried for cover. I caught him, he slipped out of my hands, again I caught him and this time I dropped him in a sack. Other stones were raised, finally I uncovered a slimy one and next to an all that was the slipperiest thing I ever tried to handle, but finally got him in the sack. Bartley began to take an interest in the chase and it wasn't long until he exclaimed, "Here's one" come and get him while I hold up this rock!" You can't hold them by grasping their tails. A tail doesn't mean much to a salamander, if he loses it he soon grows another. They have the power to snap off their tails if so caught and the act will give them their freedom. One feels rather queer holding a wiggling tail and seeing the little animal go scurrying for a place of safety. I raised another stone and out darted a banded snake, a quick grab and I had him. Bartley suddenly lost interest in rolling stones and began looking at the trees, but the lust was in him, and he was soon back on the job.

He turned a stone and out hopped a camel cricket, a quick grab or two and he had him and the snake was forgotten in the ecstasy of his capture. It was great sport, we moved tons of rock and after we were completely tired out, we counted our spoils and found that we had 100 salamanders, 3 snakes, 15 camel crickets, and several assassin bugs and beetles.

The prettiest capture of the day was a luna moth. We found it quietly resting on a maple leaf, waiting for the sun to go down and the darkness to come, for that is the time it does its flying, because its greatest enemy the birds are asleep. I take the luna moth to be our prettiest moth. Its large purpy body is covered with long fluffy scales of pure white; its wings are a pastel of pale green bordered with lavender; its head is crowned with a pair of yellow fern like antennae, and on its back wings are "trailers" which lend to it a full dress affect. Beautiful? Yes. Yet science has put it on the black-list as being injurious to the foliage of trees.

On our way back to the machine Bartley discovered a clump of American Barberry. This is a beautiful shrub and would be far superior to the Japanese variety as a hedge, but science has placed this on the black-list as being a distributor of the black rust which ruins the wheat and we are forbidden to cultivate it. So after all, "All is not gold that glitters."

We gather, from the advice being given the farmer this year, that it is his patriotic duty to take as little care of his crops as possible and pray for drouths and wash-outs.

In this record-breaking age, we'd be interested in seeing some level-headed young fellow break the record by not trying to break any records.

HELPING THE FARMER

The Department of Agriculture's forecast for this year is a wheat crop a little larger than last year's and a corn crop nearly 200,000,000 bushels larger than last year's. It is not a pleasant prospect for the farmers who have not been able to get last year's crop a price paying the production cost.

Simultaneously the Federal Farm has announced that, after spending a huge sum of public money and failing to sustain the price of wheat, it is now going to let the market find its natural level.

There is special point, then, to Chairman Legge's urgent advice to farmers to cooperate with the board by refraining from dumping their wheat on the market and reducing their acreage so as to avoid and export surplus which would make the tariff protection inoperative.

There is point, also, to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde's question: "Is there any reason in the world why a man who thought he could raise his standard of living shouldn't move to town?"

EXPORT BORING

American business, in its export trade, has started "boring from within." A good example of it was seen in the recent announcement that the Ford Motor Company was opening a big branch factory in Italy to supply cars to that country without paying the high Italian tariff.

Ford tractors are now being made mostly in Ireland, which gives a fine vantage point for distribution. Ford has an important plant making automobiles in Canada, which can now sell to that country and other British possessions without fear of a retaliatory tariff.

A more recent example along the same line is the decision of the Goodrich Company of Akron to transfer the bulk of its tire and footwear export business to its Canadian branch at Kitchener, Ont. From there it will aim to serve the rest of the British dominions.

Canada is in position to profit greatly by this sort of enterprise, dozens of "American" industries have branch factories there already. While objecting strongly to the new American tariff rates, especially on farm products, Canada may gain on the whole by industrial growth and extension of her foreign markets.

OLD-FASHIONED GIRL

They don't all want to work in an office. A discontented one writes to a column in the Chicago News:

"I'd rather wash dishes, Peel spuds by the sink, Than click a typewriter And dip into ink." Some nice young fellow ought to get a move on him and give her a chance. There must be a good many like her.

MASS PRODUCTION FOR EUROPE

With American exports to Europe declining, on the whole, there is a gain this year in our export of machinery. This is true particularly of agricultural and industrial machinery.

Europe is plainly following our example and going in for mass production. She is going to raise bigger crops with fewer men and she is going to make more of the manufactured products for which she has been depending on America.

What will happen? Europe expanding her production as we have done and substituting machine power for man power, may enjoy more prosperity and leisure. It looks as if her progress will make her more independent economically and reduce our exports.

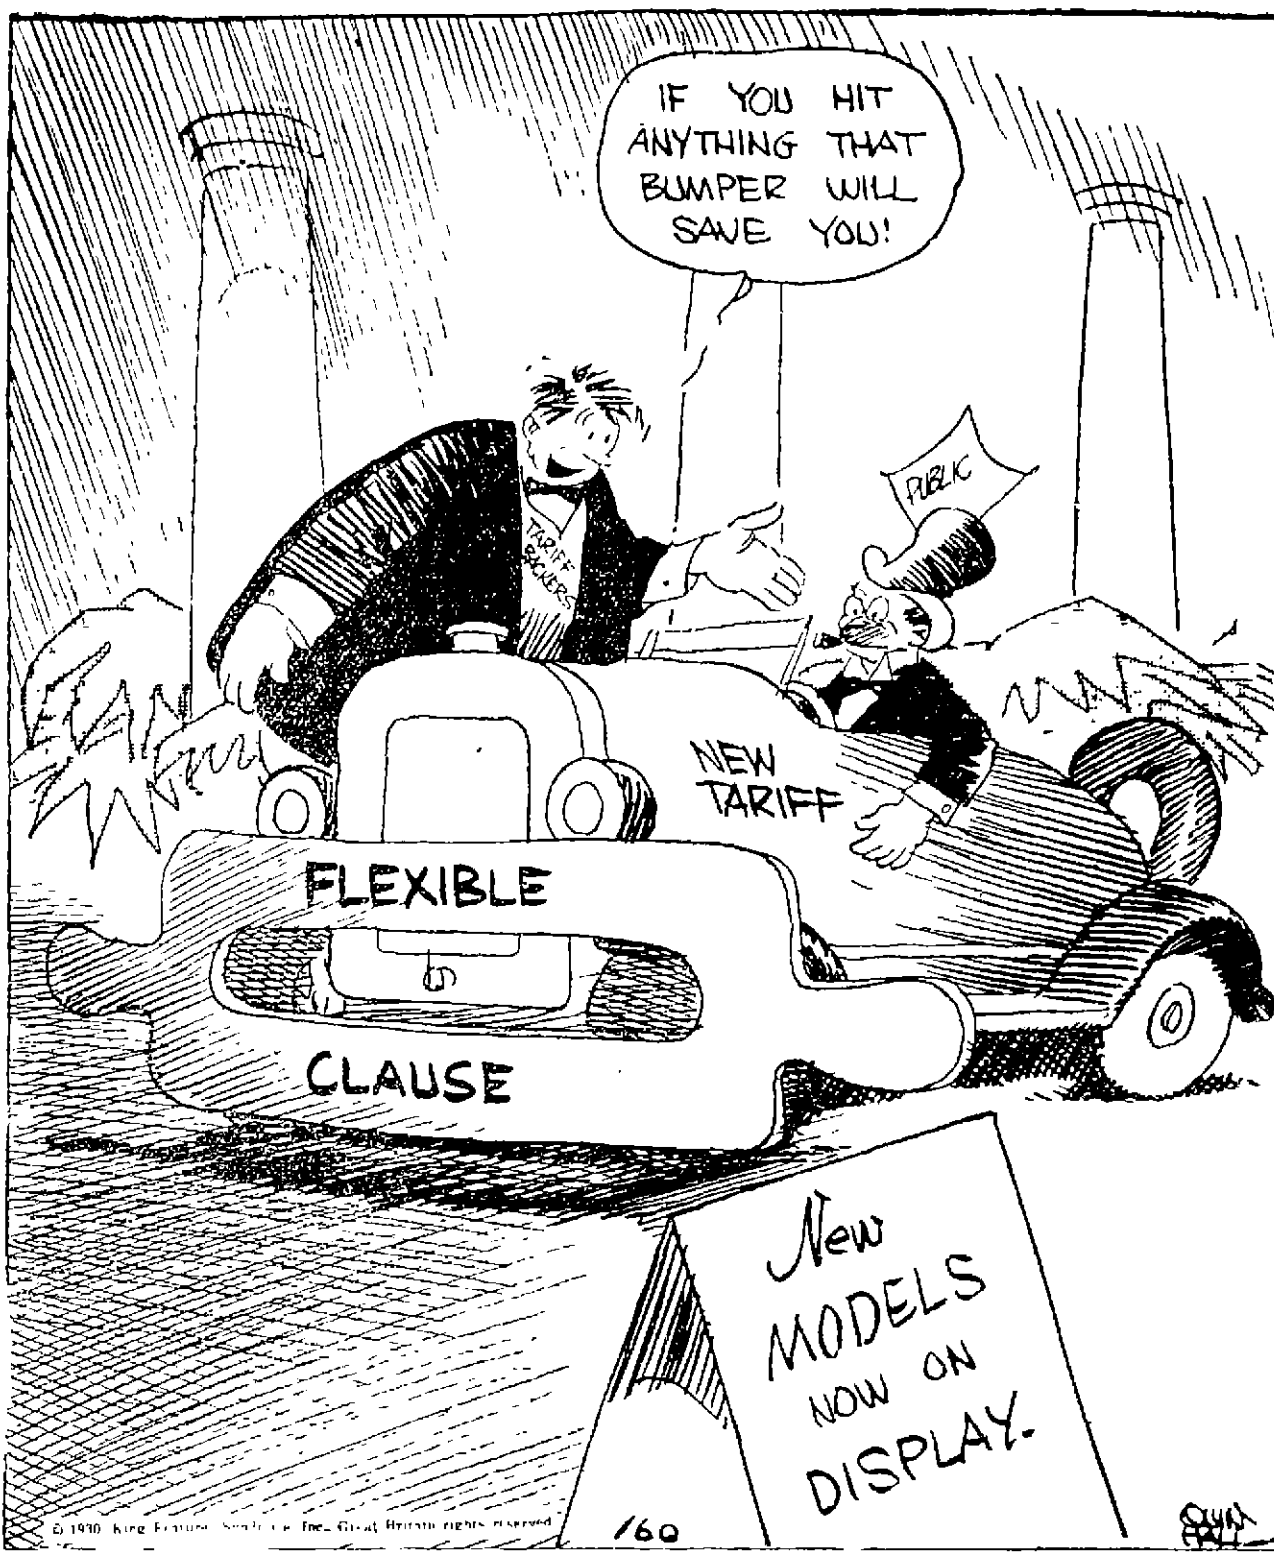

This however need not be the case. In the final adjustment with both continents highly industrialized and mechanized, as should still be our aim, Europe should be doing a heavy export for us. That is the way for all-around prosperity.

TESTING

The tent and window shades assembled to talk things over are quite cheerful. They agree that times are hard.

There are 40 percent of Americans sleeping in tents this summer than there have been in any previous year, says the census. The Great American Tent is camping on the Ohio river and camping in the shade. It is a big tent, a tree. There are many tents here now. Never were tents so in demand. The tent men say that thousands

HIS SALES TALK

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXVIII

So it was left in the young people's hands and they invited a handful of people for the evening.

"And if Emily comes home, it will be like a celebration," said Betty, by way of salving her conscience, which pinched her at little.

The party was a pleasant one, and as Aunt Judy saw the young people enjoying themselves she was glad she had arranged it. Rodney sat on his sofa, which had now come to be looked upon as his special piece of property, and for the most part conversed with Aunt Collins or Aunt Judy.

He danced a few times, but his heart wasn't in it, and concluding he was a gloomy partner, he gave it up.

And so the evening went by, and still no trace of Emily. Rodney had telephoned his people that the wedding would perhaps have to be postponed, and had then written a letter, telling of Emily's disappearance.

He gave few details; indeed, there were few to give. He just told how she had started for the hospital and had never reached there, and said that was all they really knew. He said nothing of Pauline Pennington's death, for they didn't know Pauline and could not be permitted to know.

He told them further that if Emily returned in time for the ceremony, which was set for noon on Saturday, or, indeed if she came here, and said that was all they really knew. He said nothing of Pauline Pennington's death, for they didn't know Pauline and could not be permitted to know.

Aunt Judy was up and dressed early, too, and she gave, with wisdom and clarity, orders which were promptly carried out.

She was here, there and everywhere, and her white curls were like the plume of King Henry of Navarre.

The young people, coming down later, found the gala effect really breath-taking, and, too, in a way, it was ghastly.

The marriage bell, large, white and beautiful had been hung, and it seemed as if it might well be used to toll a requiem.

The flowers gave forth delicious fragrance, and a peep into the pantries showed marvelous confections of all sorts, yet, a strange air hung over it all, not quite so much of gloom as of mystery, yet partaking of both.

Rodney, his hands clasped behind him, stood looking out the French window, across the lawns. "Poor little Rodney," said Nell, coming along and slipping her hand into his, and Rod felt that if he had one shred less of self-control, Lawlor would have a real murder to investigate at once.

"All right, Nell," he said cheerfully. "Maybe Emily will come back today."

"Maybe," said Nell, smiling at him. "Come to breakfast, Rodney. One more nickname, my lady, and it's the ravine for yours!"

He permitted that luxury of speech. However, he went to the table with a pleasant countenance, and did his best to help carry on.

"You see," Aunt Judy was saying, "when Emily comes in, we want to be all ready to say, 'La-fayette, we are here,' and so of course, we must all be here. What are you doing today, children?"

She asked of her brood, for it was being borne in upon her that for Emily's sake, she must be a delightful and efficient hostess. "Better go for a round of golf before it gets too warm."

"Yes, dear, we will," said Betty, always ready to help. "I suppose there's nothing we can do around here; we'd only be in the way."

"You have second sight, haven't you, Betty?" smiled Aunt Judy. "Now here's orders. I think we'll have everything in readiness in case Emily appears, except our clothes. You stay, they'll have to dress, and that will give us all time to dress. So when you girls come back from golfing, put on a nice little frock, but not your new-made-to-order one."

"Yes," said Betty, quickly understanding. "To her mind there was not one chance in a million of Emily's return in time for a noon wedding, but, then, there was no counting on Emily."

When the Pennington funeral took place, it was a sad day. Aunt Judy wept, and Aunt Collins wept, and the young people would come to attend. Do not go into the funeral, do not go into the funeral, do not go into the funeral.

When the Pennington funeral took place, it was a sad day. Aunt Judy wept, and Aunt Collins wept, and the young people would come to attend. Do not go into the funeral, do not go into the funeral, do not go into the funeral.

"You wouldn't be greatly edified, my dear," Aunt Judy spoke a little severely. "Mr. Spinks is a most efficient man and his capabilities as a funeral director are quite as good as when he officiates at any light function."

"Don't go, Nell," Betty begged. "Let the men go, if they think it's necessary, but let us stay at home."

"I'm not going," Aunt Judy said. "I must be here for many reasons. And Jim Pennington won't mind. I don't believe he'll know who's there and who isn't."

"What's become of my over to meals, he has such a forlorn household," Betty said.

"I asked him," Aunt Judy told her, "but he's busy packing to go away, and, too, he doesn't care to be social just now." Said he'd look in to say good-by."

So the matter was settled and Rodney Sayre and Lamb, with Pete Gibby, went to the funeral in the Hilldale church. Like all Hilldale institutions, the church was beautiful.

Modern and substantial, it was in accordance with the best canons of architecture and good taste, and its restrained use of the finest of stained glass was a joy to connoisseurs.

The congregation was arriving, and a decorum marked their manner, which was quite different from the dignity shown by them at the inquest.

Also, they dressed the part, as they always did. The women wore modish black frocks, with bunches of violets and perhaps a string of black beads.

Our young men met or saw many young people whom they knew, but were vouchsafed the merest nod of recognition.

Gibby thought whimsically that he'd seen nearly everything here but a christening, and he wondered what that would be like.

Then he realized he hadn't seen a wedding yet.

Take Stock of Distress Symptoms After Eating

Faulty Elimination Usually the Basis of This Trouble

SAYS DR. COPELAND

Backache, General Discomfort and Lack of Energy Are All Traceable to Constipation, Warns Authority, Urging That the Condition Be Corrected.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York. Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

There are certain complaints which are common to most of the human race. We give advice, but constant repetition is necessary. Time and time again society must be impressed with the importance of overcoming these conditions, in order that good health may be enjoyed.

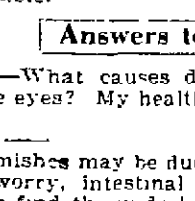

Constipation is one such condition. More symptoms are the result of this trouble than perhaps of any other disease. In addition, the symptoms are often so obscure they hardly seem traceable to this cause.

Poor intestinal elimination, if permitted to go on, results eventually in general poisoning, "auto-intoxication." There will be headache, bad breath, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and general discomfort.

Exercise is important in correcting constipation. I do not mean simply an occasional lachrymose walk, but exercise that will get the blood circulating, the bowels moving, brisk walking, gymnasium exercises, "health" exercises are all beneficial.

To hasten and increase elimination the use of mineral oil is wise. This may be taken plain or with agar-agar.

This use of the oil is not to produce the effects of castor oil, but merely acts by its presence, lubricating the intestinal wall and in this way encouraging the discharge of waste.

Answers to Health Queries

E. H. H. Q.—What causes deep circles under the eyes? My health is otherwise good.

A.—These blemishes may be due to lack of sleep, worry, intestinal upsets, etc. Try to find the underlying cause and the proper treatment will suggest itself.

A. E. R. Q.—What is the cause of eczema and what treatment would you suggest?

A.—The trouble may be due to a number of causes—improper diet and poor elimination are among the important factors when looking for a cause. Keep the bowels open and the system clear.

M. W. Q.—What will take away the mucus in my throat?

A.—You are probably troubled with nasal catarrh, with dripping into the throat. In its cure first attention must be given to correcting the underlying catarrhal condition.

MISS O. A. Q.—How can I reduce?

2.—What should a girl weigh who is 15½ ft. tall and 6 ft. 2½ in. tall?

3.—What can be done for constipation?

A.—Weight reduction is merely a matter of self-control as regards the diet. For further particulars send self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Reader Q.—What causes heartburn and what is the remedy?

2.—How can one reduce a high abdomen? Also a large bust?

A.—Heartburn is due to acidity and this in turn is caused by improper digestion and poor elimination. Correct the diet and keep the system clear.

3.—Cut down on sweets and starches and take some systematic exercise daily.

A.—Weight reduction is merely a matter of self-control as regards the diet. For further particulars send self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

HELPING THE FARMER

The Department of Agriculture's forecast for this year is a wheat crop a little larger than last year's and a corn crop nearly 200,000,000 bushels larger than last year's. It is not a pleasant prospect for the farmers who have not been able to get for last year's crop a price paying the production cost.

Simultaneously the Federal Farm has announced that, after spending a huge sum of public money and failing to sustain the price of wheat, it is now going to let the market find its natural level.

There is special point, then, to Chairman Legge's urgent advice to farmers to cooperate with the board by refraining from dumping their wheat on the market and reducing their acreage so as to avoid and export surplus which would make the tariff protection inoperative.

There is point, also, to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde's question: "Is there any reason in the world why a man who thought he could raise his standard of living shouldn't move to town?"

EXPORT BORING

American business, in its export trade, has started "boring from within." A good example of it was seen in the recent announcement that the Ford Motor Company was opening a big branch factory in Italy to supply cars to that country without paying the high Italian tariff.

Ford tractors are now being made mostly in Ireland, which gives a fine vantage point for distribution. Ford has an important plant making automobiles in Canada, which can now sell to that country and other British possessions without fear of a retaliatory tariff.

A more recent example along the same line is the decision of the Goodrich Company of Akron to transfer the bulk of its tire and footwear export business to its Canadian branch at Kitchener, Ont. From there it will aim to serve the rest of the British dominions.

Canada is in position to profit greatly by this sort of enterprise, dozens of "American industries have branch factories there already. While objecting strongly to the new American tariff rates, especially on farm products, Canada may gain on the whole by industrial growth and extension of her foreign markets.

OLD-FASHIONED GIRL

They don't all want to work in an office. A discontented one writes to a column in the Chicago News:

"I'd rather wash dishes,
Peel spuds by the sink,
Than click a typewriter
And dip into ink."

Some nice young fellow ought to get a move on him and give her a chance. There must be a good many like her.

MASS PRODUCTION FOR EUROPE

With American exports to Europe, declining, on the whole, there is a gain this year in our export of machinery. This is true particularly of agricultural and industrial machinery.

Europe is plainly following our example and going in for mass production. She is going to raise bigger crops with fewer men and she is going to make more of the manufactured products for which she has been depending on America.

What will happen? Europe, expanding her production as we have done and substituting machine power for man power, may enjoy more prosperity and more leisure. It looks as if her progress will make her more independent economically and reduce our exports.

This, however, need not be the case. In the final adjustment, with both continents highly industrialized and mechanized, we should still be supplying Europe with what we can make best, and Europe should be doing likewise for us. That is the way for all-around prosperity.

TENTING

The tent and awning makers, assembled to talk things over, are quite cheerful. Their business is good. They give the credit to hard times.

There are 40 percent more Americans sleeping in tents this summer than there have been in any previous year since the war. The great American family is tenting on the old camp ground and camping in the shade of the old apple tree. There are more tourists than apples in many orchards right now. Never were tents so in demand.

The tent men say that thousands of families are taking to outdoor life this summer to save money. They have to live somehow, and if they're out of work and income, it pays to rent their houses and go touring in the family bus or set up a tent in the suburbs.

HIS SALES TALK

"WHERE'S EMILY?"

by CAROLYN WELLS

CHAPTER XXVIII

SO it was left in the young people's hands and they invited a handful of people for the evening.

"And if Emily comes home, it will be like a celebration," said Betty, by way of salving her conscience, which pinched her at little.

The party was a pleasant one, and as Aunt Judy saw the young people enjoying themselves she was glad she had arranged it.

Rodney sat on his sofa, which had now come to be looked upon as his special piece of property, and for the most part conversed with Abel Collins or Aunt Judy. He danced a few times, but his heart wasn't in it, and concluding he was a gloomy partner, he gave it up.

And so the evening went by, and still no trace of Emily Duane.

Rod had telephoned his people that the wedding would perhaps have to be postponed, and had then written a letter, telling of Emily's disappearance.

He gave few details; indeed, there were few to give. He just told how she had started for the hospital and had never reached there, and said that was all they really knew. He said nothing of Pauline Pennington's death, for they didn't know Pauline and could not be greatly interested.

He told them further that if Emily returned in time for the ceremony, which was set for noon on Saturday, or, indeed if she came Saturday afternoon, the wedding would take place. If she didn't, they must await developments.

Getting this off, Rod felt his work was finished. He went back to his sofa and sat there.

Always energetic, always ingenious in thinking up plans, the situation now completely baffled him. He saw no use in rushing madly round the country on a search which was continually being conducted by better men for the purpose than he. He sat and thought and thought what he could do to further the hunt, but he could think of nothing.

He had advertised extensively, Emily's picture was in many papers, but though large rewards were offered, Rod hadn't much faith in it all.

He had telephoned his friend about Fleming Stone and the friend had promised to do his best to secure the great detective's services. But Stone was out of town and couldn't be reached before Sunday at the earliest.

However, Rodney's judgment prompted him to wait, rather than engage a lesser expert.

Then Friday became a thing of the past and it was Saturday.

The wedding day! The day looked forward to so eagerly by the principals, by the attendants and by half of Hildale, who would be the wedding guests.

The florists and caterers had been told to proceed with their work as if nothing had happened, and they began to arrive early with their cars and trucks and workmen.

Early too, and she gave, with wisdom and clarity, orders which were promptly carried out.

She was here, there and everywhere, and her white curls were the plume of King Henry of Navarre.

The young people, coming down later, found the gala effect really breath-taking, and, too, in a way, it was ghastly.

The marriage bell, large, white and beautiful had been hung, and it seemed as if it might well be used to toll a requiem.

The flowers gave forth delicious fragrance, and a peep into the pantries showed marvelous confections of all sorts, yet, a strange air hung over it all, not quite so much of gloom as of mystery, yet partaking of both.

Rodney, his hands clasped behind him, stood looking out the French window, across the lawn.

"Poor little Roddy," said Nell, coming along and slipping her hand into his, and Rod felt that if he had one shred less of self-control, Lawlor would have a real murder to investigate at once.

"All right Nell," he said cheerfully. "Maybe Emily will come back today."

"Maybe," said Nell, smiling at him. "Come to breakfast, Roddy."

"One more nickname, my lady, and it's the ravine for yours!" he said to himself, feeling he might be permitted that luxury of speech.

However, he went to the table with a pleasant countenance, and did his best to help carry on.

"You see," Aunt Judy was saying, "when Emily comes in, we want to be all ready to say, 'La-fayette, we are here,' and so of course, we must all be here. What are you doing today, children?"

She asked of her brood, for it was being borne in upon her that for Emily's sake, she must be a delightful and efficient hostess. "Better go for a round of golf before it gets too warm."

"Yes, dear, we will," said Betty, "always ready to help. 'I suppose there's nothing we can do around here; we'd only be in the way.'"

"You have second sight, haven't you, Betty?" smiled Aunt Judy. "Now here's orders. I think we'll have everything in readiness in case Emily appears, except our clothes. You see, she'll have to dress, and that will give us all time to dress. So when you girls come back from golfing, put on a nice little frock, but not your bridesmaids' toggery, see?"

"Yes," said Betty, quickly understanding. "To her mind there was not one chance in a million of Emily's return in time for a noon wedding, but, then, there was no counting on Emily."

"Why, the Pennington funeral is today," said Nell, suddenly.

"I know," Aunt Judy replied, "but I didn't think you young people would care to attend. Do you ever go to funerals?"

"Well, no," and Nell flushed a little, "but, to tell the truth, I wanted to see how that funny Spinks would look running a funeral!"

While we're deflating things, why not taxes, too?

These miniature golf courses, we suppose, are all right; but why doesn't some enterprising old-timer, remembering his youth, rent a corner lot and start a revival of "shinney-in-the-hole?"

Missionaries are more highly esteemed in China. Bandits who

"You wouldn't be greatly edified, my dear," Aunt Judy spoke a little severely. "Mr. Spinks is a most efficient man and his capabilities as a funeral director are quite as good as when he officiates at any light function."

"Don't go, Nell," Betty begged. "Let the men go, if they think it's necessary, but let us stay at home."

"I'm not going," Aunt Judy said. "I must be here for many reasons. And Jim Pennington won't mind. I don't believe he'll know who's there and who isn't."

"What's become of him?" asked Betty. "I invited him over to meals, he has such a forlorn household."

"I asked him," Aunt Judy told her, "but he's busy packing to go away, and, too, he doesn't care to be social just now. Said he'd look in to say good-by." So the matter was settled and Rodney Sayre and Lamb, with Pete Gibby, went to the funeral in the Hildale church. Like all Hildale institutions, the church was beautiful.

Modern and substantial, it was in accordance with the best canons of architecture and good taste, and its restrained use of the finest of stained glass was a joy to connoisseurs.

The congregation was arriving, and a decorum marked their manner, which was quite different from the dignity shown by them at the inquest.

Also, they dressed the part, as they always did. The women wore modish black frocks, with bunches of violets and perhaps a string of black beads.

Our young men met or saw many young people whom they knew, but were vouchsafed the merest nod of recognition.

Gibby thought whimsically that he'd seen nearly everything here but a christening, and he wondered what that would be like.

Then he realized he hadn't seen a wedding—yet.

Nor did he expect to see one. He had not the least hope that Emily would return that day, nor any other day. This was not pessimism, but a conviction that she was either dead, or for some other reason, lost to them forever.

The strains of music as they entered, sounded like heaven. It would, in Hildale.

The congregation took the pews with no rustle or sound, and the services began.

They were very short, simple, and beautiful.

Handkerchiefs were lifted decorously, there was, of course, no sob or snuffle.

Rodney could just see Jim Pennington's profile as he sat near the front.

Poor old Jim. Rod couldn't quite make up his mind whose lot was worse. He would think it easier for Jim, for he knew where Pauline was. Then he would realize that hard as his own case was, not for a moment would he admit that he would rather know Emily dead.

No! While there was life there was hope, and, if he couldn't quite say that, at least, while there was ignorance, there was hope.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Take Stock of Distress Symptoms After Eating

Faulty Elimination Usually the Basis of This Trouble

SAYS DR. COPELAND

Backache, General Discomfort and Lack of Energy Are All Traceable to Constipation, Warns Authority, Urging That the Condition Be Corrected.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

THERE are certain complaints which are common to most of the human race. We give advice, but constant repetition is necessary. Time and time again society must be impressed with the importance of overcoming these conditions, in order that good health may be enjoyed.

Constipation is one such condition. More symptoms are the result of this trouble than perhaps of any other disease. In addition, they hardly seem traceable to this cause.

Poor intestinal elimination, if permitted to go on, results eventually in general poisoning, "auto-intoxication." There will be headache, bad breath, loss of appetite, sleeplessness and general discomfort. There are many other symptoms equally disagreeable.

The first thing to do about constipation is to sit down and take stock of all the symptoms from which you suffer. Nine times out of ten it will be found that there is acidity after eating, bad taste in the mouth, feeling of fullness after eating and poor elimination. There may be pain in the joints, backache, dark spots before the eyes, lack of energy, and so forth.

In the treatment of constipation the diet is most important. Avoid all fried foods, as well as excessive quantities of starch and sugar.

Add to the diet bran, coarse cereals and breads, roughage such as celery, raw cabbage and salads. Stewed fruits, well-cooked vegetables, plenty of water to drink—all these will help.

Exercise is important in correcting constipation. I do not mean simply an occasional lackadaisical walk, but exercise that will give the blood circulation. Swimming, rowing, brisk walking, gymnasium exercises, "health" exercises are all beneficial.

To hasten and increase elimination the use of mineral oil is wise. This may be taken plain or with agar-agar.

This use of the oil is not to produce the effects of castor oil, but merely acts by its presence, lubricating the intestinal wall and in this way encouraging the discharge of waste.

FAILURE OF CONGRESS TO PROVIDE MUNITION SUPPLY WOULD PROVE DISASTROUS

WASHINGTON, July 14 — The United States would find it virtually impossible to put an effective army of 1,000,000 men in the field within six months after a declaration of war because of failure of Congress to maintain vast ammunition reserves.

This is disclosed in the admissions of war department experts, who have repeatedly appealed to Congress to liberalize the appropriations for ammunition.

All of the elaborate plans of the war department for the mobilization of the National Guard and organized reserves would go for naught. The army has the guns but could not fire.

Responding to repeated complaints of the war department, congress has provided replacement funds each year with which to maintain to some extent the supply of ammunition left from the World War.

The cost of making the war reserve complete and serviceable; however, is $384,039,958, and for the current year Congress has appropriated something over $300,000 to achieve this object.

Because of the mass of business before the recent Congress the ammunition question was given little attention. In a statement given in closed hearings of the House Appropriations Committee, however, Major General Clarence C. Williams, Chief of Ordnance, summarized the situation as follows:

"The cost of making the war reserve complete and serviceable, that is, including all calibers of ammunition, is $384,039,958. The total amount provided to apply to that is $272,741; that is, in the 1931 estimates.

"So that virtually we may say we make no progress. The proportion is so great, if you put it down in the number of years, that it reduces almost to an absurdity."

The ammunition reserve problem involves not only the use of 45,000,000 rounds each year by the army for training purposes, but an annual deterioration of 25,000,000 rounds of reserve stocks. Constant replacement is necessary.

The total reserve ammunition stock is based upon the war department's plan to put two armies with a total of a million men in the field upon a declaration of war.

At the present time, according to General Williams, private ammunition resources are virtually negligible for war-time needs.

He declared to the committee that the army would face a worse situation with respect to ammunition now than it did when the nation entered the World War.

At that time, he explained, many factories in this country were producing ammunition for the British, and were taken over by this government.

Comparatively little ammunition could be turned out by American factories within six months after war was declared, he said.

FRONT OF TUCKER STORE IS DAMAGED

Container Corporation Tractor With Load of Straw Crashes Into Building.

The front end of the general store of Edward Tucker at the intersection of the Logan Elm and Chillicothe pike was wrecked when a driverless Fordson tractor with two loads of straw, on its way to the Container Corporation of America, this city, crashed into the store breaking the large plate glass window, raising the roof two or three feet, and demolishing several gasoline pumps, and doing other damage.

The unknown driver and employee of the Container Co. jumped off the tractor at the top of the hill about 200 feet from the store, and let the tractor and straw choose its own course.

About five minutes before the accident, a daughter of Mr. Tucker's had been sitting on the porch reading, and when she came out the second time she found the porch covered with straw from top to bottom.

BROKE DETOUR, CAR IS DITCHED

Unknown Driver Goes Into Ditch at Logan-Court, Violating Road Signs.

The first accident of its kind was seen on S. Court street Saturday evening when a non-resident of the city drove into a ditch at Logan and Court streets.

With the help of several men standing nearby, the auto was taken out of the ditch and continued on its course.

Drivers are warned to detour at Mound street and go to their destinations by either the Kingston or Jackson pikes, and thereby avoid these minor accidents.

Ashville's win streak in the Suburban League was increased to three games Sunday when, with Bud Costlow showing great form, the Groveport outfit was turned back. The score was 4 to 2 and the contest was one of the best played this summer.

Ashville, as usual, started in the early innings scoring one tally in each of the first, second, and third frames. Groveport scored in the third and fourth frames and from that time on was helpless before Costlow's curves and fast ball. Bud fanned eight men.

Groveport outthrew Ashville 9 to 8, but Ashville's bingles were for more distance than the losers. C. Pettibone and Trego connected for doubles. Stoker hit a triple and Trego and Davis hit home runs.

VILLAGE WARS ON BLACKBIRDS

South Charleston has started a war on blackbirds with the result that several thousand of them have been killed. Sometimes as many as 25 or 30 are killed with one blast of a shot gun.

The birds swarm into the village in the evenings and are a nuisance to residents, thus the effort to kill them.

"Now, boys," said the teacher, "always remember that you should never end a sentence with the word 'with.'" "That is," he went on, hurriedly, "unless you have nothing else to end it with."

Tens of thousands of men and women of all ages have endorsed Konjola, the new and different medicine for the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and for rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Read what one of them, Mrs. Rual Miller Kidd, 637 Sedam street, Cincinnati, says of Konjola: "I was ill eight years, and for three years unable to walk properly. I had acid stomach, and could not keep water down. Spots danced before my eyes, and I was dizzy, nervous and constipated. Kidneys bothered me, too, and I had to get up five or six times at night. Ankles and knees were swollen to twice normal size, and my weight fell to 110 pounds. But Konjola came as a blessing to me. Today I weigh 150; have a fine appetite and my kidneys are strong."

Would you like to know all about the medicine that does such things? Your druggist will be glad to tell you about this remarkable Konjola.

Konjola is sold in Circleville at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

SAMMY MANDELL PEEVED BY SELLOUT TO SINGER REPORT

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., July 14.—Incensed at rumors that he has "sold out" to Al Singer, Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion of the world, today declared his anxiety and confidence to defeat his opponent on Thursday night had been augmented to the greatest pitch.

"These ridiculous reports," said Mandell, "have placed me in a difficult position. I can only disprove such accusations by my work in the ring and I believe that those who sit at the ringside on Thursday night will realize during the first minute of fighting the stupidity and unfounded nature of these rumors."

"I'd kill the man who approaches me on an errand of fixing a fight. My manager, Eddie Kane, would do the same. I have been in the ring 11 years and have engaged in over 170 professional bouts, yet the finger of suspicion has never touched me. I don't think I deserve such treatment now."

"The lightweight title to me represents the greatest possible achievement. I intend to keep the

Many of those disappointed in his performance of yesterday did not pause to take into consideration that the lightweight champion worked mainly for speed and on several occasions deliberately permitted his opponents to land what appeared to be damaging punches.

After warming up for a round by shadow boxing on the flooring of Gus Wilson's indoor arena, Mandell stepped into the ring to box six rounds with three sparring partners. He opened with two sessions against the capable colored boy Bobby Risdon. The titleholder's best work of the afternoon was accomplished against this spar mate. He used his left hand to advantage as is his wont and altogether presented a pretty exhibition.

Vincent Valenti, former amateur star, and Charlie Goodman, veteran featherweight, also boxed two rounds with Mandell.

Aside from boxing Mandell performed four rounds of floor exercises. He dispensed with roadwork yesterday but his weight after working was around the 137 mark.

Improvement in every phase of the game during the past week. Each session indicates that when he concludes work here tomorrow he will have achieved perfection in condition, boxing skill, wind, timing of punches and speed.

Cubs Score Four Runs After Closing Time Arrives But Boston Holds Short Lead To Take Game—Washington Knocked From American Lead.

NEW YORK, July 14.—Just when everyone was pointing the finger of scorn at boxing with its fouls, long counts and thin entertainment, baseball rose on its 94 4-100 percent pure haunches today and rocked the world of sport. It seems that the shrill shriek of a policeman's whistle, a couple of stop-watches and a coating of good old New England culture and piety are going to decide baseball games from now on.

When the 6 o'clock Sunday baseball law was put into effect yesterday in Boston the Braves were leading the Cubs, 3 to 0 at the end of the eighth inning and the time was exactly 5.34 o'clock. But in the ninth inning the Bruins scored four runs. Then came 6 o'clock. A cop blew a whistle. The officials went into a huddle and pretty soon Kiki Cuyler, who had made a hit and stole a base, almost keeled over for it was announced Boston had grabbed it, 3 to 0. Everything scored after 5.34 was just for fun, the officials decided. In the first game the new law was not working and besides Selbold allowed the Cubs only seven hits, so Boston won without a whistle or anything 2 to 1.

Making it three out of four the Tigers defeated the Senators, 5 to 4, and lowered Washington into second place. Vic Sorrell did some fair pitching and scored the winning run with a single. Elliott allowed the Pirates only four hits, while the Robins got nine off French, but Dumb Doras on the bags handed it to Pitts-

SUPPOSE you are today paying 50c a tube for your tooth paste (and there are many very good dentifrices selling today at that price).

Suppose, like most people, you buy about twelve tubes during a year. Now if you knew that you could buy as good a dentifrice as can be made and still save each year the price of 25 loaves of bread or 60 bars of soap or 40 pounds of sugar or a box of fine cigars—could you conscientiously fail to take advantage of such an opportunity?

SAMMY MANDELL PEEVED BY SELLOUT TO SINGER REPORT

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., July 14.—Incensed at rumors that he has "sold out" to Al Singer, Sammy Mandell, lightweight champion of the world, today declared his anxiety and confidence to defeat his opponent on Thursday night had been augmented to the greatest pitch.

"These ridiculous reports," said Mandell, "have placed me in a difficult position. I can only disprove such accusations by my work in the ring and I believe that those who sit at the ringside on Thursday night will realize during the first minute of fighting the stupidity and unfounded nature of these rumors."

"The lightweight title to me represents the greatest possible achievement. I intend to keep the

"Such reports are not fair to Singer or myself. They are usually begun by the type of men whose interest in the boxing game is confined solely to what they are able to gain for themselves out of it. If it is the last thing in the world I do I will exercise every ounce of energy in an attempt to defeat Singer and emphasize the folly of these current reports."

A group of Mandell's friends from Chicago today set out with some $50,000 for the purpose of wagering on the lightweight champion at the purported odds of 8 to 5 in favor of Singer.

In his work in the training ring here Mandell has shown decided improvement in every phase of the game during the past week. Each session indicates that when he concludes work here tomorrow he will have achieved perfection in condition, boxing skill, wind, timing of punches and speed.

Many of those disappointed in his performance of yesterday did not pause to take into consideration that the lightweight champion worked mainly for speed and on several occasions deliberately permitted his opponents to land what appeared to be damaging punches.

Al Simmons popped his twenty first homer and the A's got 16 other bingle bangles and humbled the Browns 12 to 1.

Terry and Ott each got four hits as the Giants knocked Benny Frey to the baths and bounced on the Reds to the Melody of 9 to 5.

When Sherid, weakened in the ninth, Ted Lyons, pinch hitting, poled a double, the Sox scored three runs and there was all manner of excitement, but the Yankees managed to stave off the rally and won 7 to 5.

Rain was charitable and ended the misery in the seventh inning, Cleveland winning over the Red Sox 11 to 3.

The cardinals and Phillies were idle.
